

INSHALLAH, INSHALLAH, INSHALLAH,

i eat the sun on a sunday. it drips down my throat, all the sweetness of a great white peach. quiero bailar contigo, amor, it's imperative we do.
qué pasó, paso, paso,
i care more about the sounds scintillating caress, suck on suspiro, suspiro caught in my throat, la luna se despierta rosada & we all kiss salt off the shells washed up on shore, sold for un singun peso, i'm reimagining life where i am happy & i gorge myself, wail on the ravine of endless possibility, it's exhilarating, all the life i stick my hands into, all the want i let myself have, kindness looks like so many things, i pick up the small winged thing off a much-too-large-sunflower & it gives me a much-too-large-rose & i tend a tune & gift it to them & it titillates it back to me, shaded under this canopy of whisper-paper-soft-petals, i swirl & twirl & whirl into whipped merengue, sticky spun sugar/i know it's too late to introduce new conventions let me/try anyways/i keep breaking walls in these poems/i want to say so clearly que/tequierotequierotequierotequiero/y te deseo que sueñes bien/y te deseo que amas/the way we dream about in the quiet of it all/

AND ANYWAYS DID YOU HEAR ABOUT THAT SONG THAT TIME I DANCED THE WHOLE
NIGHT & IT WAS SO BEAUTIFUL & IF THIS IS A VOICEMAIL I SING WITH THE DIAL TONE & I WISH YOU A LOVELY SPRING
& I'LL SEE YOU AGAIN. I'LL SEE YOU AGAIN. I'LL SEE YOU AGAIN & i'll love you always. i'll love you always.
